Record-setting blizzard strands Xavier travellers

By Anne Martin
The Xavier Newswire

Asking for an extension took on a new meaning Monday when classes resumed without some stranded students and faculty.

A unique hurricane-force blizzard dashed many plans of ending Spring Break on time.

The blizzard, which dumped record amounts of snow with hurricane-force winds on the eastern coast, affected several major interstates, clogging nationwide traffic of Spring Break travellers.

Parts of I-75 were closed in Georgia and Tennessee, while the airports in Atlanta, Washington D.C. and New York remained open Sunday evening, but few flights were scheduled.

Delta Air Lines canceled more than 1,000 flights Saturday and resumed limited flights Sunday.

This eastern coast gridlock affected

Snow stuff

- At least 170 people died over the weekend as a result of the snowstorm.

- On North Carolina's 6,684-foot Mount Mitchell, park rangers measured 50 inches of snow and 14-foot drifts.

- The Red Cross opened 600 shelters in 20 states.

- More than 800 cars were towed in Washington D.C. because they were in violation of snow emergency laws.

- At 7 p.m. Sunday, the blizzard's fastest winds were recorded at 144 mph atop Mount Washington in New Hampshire.

more than a few faculty members who were unable to make it back on time for Monday's classes. According to the Registrar's Office, among those stranded were Dr. Tim Daniel of the Computer Science Department; Dr. Paul Knitter of the Theology Department; and Brother Jerome Pryor of the Art Department. Of the student Spring Breakers stranded, Jill Valiton, junior, tried to return to Cincinnati only to make it as far as Chattanooga. "I thought going south for Spring Break meant fun and sun, not being stranded in a car for 21 hours," she said.

Other students decided not to attempt outrunning the storm. SGA Senator Angela Wong was vacationing in Hilton Head, SC and decided to stay on the coast with some friends until driving conditions improved.

Even Monday's SGA meeting was stifled by the weather. According to Senator Joe Booth, President Pat Potter was stranded somewhere in Georgia and other senate members were absent due to the storm as well.

However, Booth said since not much was covered in the meeting, the absences were not too detrimental.

Club serves as Honor Guard for mayor

Pershing Rifles receive city honor

By Amy Helmes
The Xavier Newswire

The Xavier Pershing Rifles, an ROTC military club, has been named Cincinnati Mayor Dwight Tillery's Honor Guard.

The club, which is dedicated to developing superior leadership, fostering fraternal unity and promoting community service, extended its services to Tillery.

Mayor Tillery was pleased with the offer and said, "I am delighted and honored to accept your appointment as my personal honor guard."

The Pershing Rifles will provide the mayor with color guards and escorts when the need arises. This may include parades, meetings and other Cincinnati ceremonies the mayor attends.

Pershing Rifle Commander Scott Jackson said the appointment is a prestigious honor.

"We are very proud to secure this appointment," he said. "We work very hard for our community and this appointment has made everything worthwhile."

In addition, Jackson

Jackson said he felt great pride in the fact that Xavier was chosen over other local schools.

While he noted the appointment was not the result of a competition, Jackson said the recognition is nice.

Executive Officer Sean McWilliams agreed.

"It is interesting that we were chosen over the university of Cincinnati Pershing Rifles," said McWilliams. "Thankfully, excellence has received its due reward."

Club members are proud of their new honor. Said member Carrie Barhorst, "We hope to be very active in our new position."

"Our club seeks to serve the Cincinnati community in as many ways as possible. As future officers in the Army, we commit ourselves to public service," she said.

SAC picks Blues Traveler for Spring Concert

By Anne Martin
The Xavier Newswire

After months of speculation, SAC announced Monday Blues Traveler will indeed be performing at Spring Concert.

The show will take place April 22 at 8 p.m. in the Fieldhouse. Tickets will go on sale Thurs. March 25 in the SAC office and prices will be $9 for Xavier students and $15 for the public.

According to SAC concert chair Brian Redden, approximately 2,500 tickets will be sold and the best seats will go to Xavier students.

"Every seat on the floor will be reserved for Xavier students," he said.

Blues Traveler, which has toured with groups such as the Spin Doctors, Phish and the Jerry Garcia Band, incorporates a unique mix of blues, rock, innovative rhythm and improvisation into its sound. Apparently this is a mixture well known to the Xavier community.

Said Redden, "Blues Traveler was one of the bands mentioned in the music survey in the beginning of the year. They are upbeat and high energy, and they really involve the audience in the show."

Cynthia Bellinger, the associate director of student activities, said, "We're really excited because so many students have worked on this. And the fact that this is not just a SAC thing, it's for the whole campus." She also said they are still looking for volunteers to help with behind-the-scenes work.

Why ask why?

Inquiry rewarded with painful answers

Matt Alander

The Xavier Newswire

I think Ted Bundy said it best when he said, "Is it getting warm in here or is it just me?"

Let's face it, life is painful, so is death. But it's all a part of life, ya know? The good, the bad and the ugly all come together in one big package we are continually unwrapping every day of our miserable existence.

We gotta eat so we can live, we gotta cry so we know how to laugh, and we gotta question in order to find the answers.

"What answers?" you enquire. The answers to the questions like the one you just asked.

I think Axl Rose said it best when he squelched, "You wan'da step into my world/ It's a sociopsychotic state of bliss."

When we feel pain, at least we know we're alive right? But if all you're feeling is pain, is it worth living? That's a tough question. Ya want a tough answer? Chomp on some rawhide and aluminum foil with a mouthful of cavities, then you'll know the true meaning of pain.

This is not to make light of people's pain, but to ask you what the hell you are doing with rawhide and aluminum in your mouth, because we all have a certain amount of control over what we do.

With this notion of control in mind, I can't help but laugh when people who chug on brewskies while sucking on cancer sticks complain about feeling helpless and overpowered in this ruthless society. They're afraid of someone killing them when their ultimate death is actually a crapshoot between which will get them first: cirrhosis of the liver or a huge, black lump of cancer lodged in their right lung.

These people complain without question, and never question their feelings of pain and helplessness.

If your pain makes you question our ultimate purpose as human beings, our place in this infinite jumble of electrons, protons and neutrons, then . . . good! We need a sense of purpose to make sense of our extremely confused existence in this universe.

Some of the most enlightening collegiate moments for me have not been in the classroom, but in everyday or everynight conversations with everyday people.

Of these conversations, some of the most memorable have been after an exhausting day of something, resulting in a crashing action on my horizontal half of the bunk bed.

My roommate, who is also physically, mentally, emotionally, spiritually exhausted, begins to speak and we discuss the finer things in life as open mouth saliva seeps into the mattress.

My roommate and I have discussed the consequences of religion in society, the confusion of male/female relationships, death, life, love and rubber gloves. This down to earth approach of communication enlightens us both to worlds we never knew existed.

Staff Editorial

Find them before they find you

SGA elections are one week away (polls are open next Wednesday and Thursday) and do you know who your candidates are?

Of course not. According to some harebrained scheme, official announcement of candidacy cannot be made until noon Friday, although word has it savvy politicians have already been putting their fingers on what they hope to be the pulse of XU.

A debate will be held Monday morning during Commons Hour in the Terrace Room. Hopefully this is where the executive ticket candidates will define a role for student government at Xavier for 93-94. By that time, candidates will have had the weekend to campaign, although in what manner we dare not speculate.

As is always said, this is an important election. This time is doubly important because the new SGA contingent will be dealing with a new Vice President of Student Development. If SGA is to continue to open lines of communication between administrators and students on issues ranging from Xavier going Greek to opening the spring semester on a Monday to campus activity programming, the entire student body will be responsible next week for helping Election Committee chairperson Paul St. Pierre meet his goal.

A 100 percent increase in voter turnout will send a signal to Dr. Slepitzka that students at XU are concerned and aware—at least of who is running for office and who isn't.

—B.R.P.

Spare Change

Geeee, that's great.

Maybe Xavier should offer credit for late night conversations with roommates. It's a thought. Maybe not a very good one, but a thought no less.

I think Shakespeare said it best in a sonnet, "My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun."

No, they're not Willie, but you love her just the same. No matter what the pain, no matter the torment, damn, we got it easy. Would you rather be an intergalactic microbe floating from Alpha Centauri to the next Star Trek movie, The Search for Preparation H? I thought not.

And I think it was summed up best by Arnold Schwarzenhoog— . . . Schwargenhopen— . . . Stupenfueme— . . . Sylvester Stallone when he said, "Whuh?"

What is my point you ask? Hell if I know. But I got you to ask, and that's what it takes in order to make sense of the pain, struggle, natural disaster and fleeting pleasure we experience everyday.

I really don't think there is a single unified purpose for our existence, just a lot of little ones. Find your's, and hold on to 'em, but keep askin' those questions.

Clean the sand, or snow, from inbetween your toes.

Xavier community vents frustration

Sherlock bites bullet, Sigward takes flak

Get a clue Sherlock

In response to Kevin Sherlock's letter "Column, Cartoon are Hate Crimes" which appeared in the March 3, 1993 issue of the Xavier Newswire:

I do not have all the answers, but the truth revealed to me is this: each one of us is very special. Special because each one of us is a unique creation, a human being, with very different talents and very rich personalities.

Throughout our lives, we look into a mirror. What we see is more than ourselves; what we see is Infinite.

In this mirror, we see people—individuals we know and others we have not yet met.

Although it is possible, it is often very difficult to accept these people in the mirror—they are different from us. Yet they are us.

The person I see walking down the Mall with haircut and clothes and attitude and ideas different from mine is not much different from me: she or he breathes the same air that I do, eats food from the same earth, is loved by people—maybe even the same people I am loved by.

Someday this person and I will look into the mirror together. My friend who is alcoholic will look there, too. So will my high school friend who is homosexual. And the kind woman who struggled with the question of abortion. And the young man who looks for meaning in his life just to continue waking up in the morning...What do you see in this mirror?

The unity has already been established; all we have to do is realize it.

The only way we can deal with this suffering in hatred—is through living with it. Only then can we let the tears begin to cleanse and to heal these things and these people that cry out to Heaven.

We do not know where our confused lives are going...to what end or to what beginning. But we are here now.

When you look at those faces in the mirror, you look at yourself.

No life is a waste if effort to live fully and to love is put into it. No one's life is a waste who lightens the load of another.

-Brian Shircliff

Village People, Pope and Sherlock not a pleasant mix

This is the last time I am doing this.

For over three years now I have attended Xavier University, and at least once every semester of those three years I have had to endure a one-sided soliloquy from a sexist, homophobic poorly informed individual convinced that the destruction of society hinges on people, ideas and values that are not his own.

Kevin Sherlock's simplistic and hateful letter referring to the topics of abortion and homosexuality as "two sins which cry to Heaven for vengeance" is right in step with this longstanding Xavier tradition.

I will not waste my time in systematically deconstructing and negating the stereotypical and misinformed statements made in his article two weeks ago nor will I try to shed some real information and facts with Mr. Sherlock.

I have written numerous articles for the Newswire in the past trying to educate people like him on the issues surrounding homosexuality, and I am not about to go through this again.

Nor will I even begin to defend the right of women in this country to have an abortion, as decided by the United States Supreme Court in the case of Roe v. Wade, January 22, 1973 (look it up if you have never heard of it, Kevin).

I have learned over the past three years that people who write these articles are not interested in learning about the realities of these issues; instead, they would rather listen to themselves talk.

While there are some people on this campus that share your small and simplistic vision of the world, Kevin, there are a multitude of others who know differently.

I'm sorry to be the bearer of bad news, but neither the world, nor this university, revolves around the ignorant uninformed opinions of narrow-minded members of the Moral Majority.

In addition, the only "hate crimes" committed on this campus is the one you perpetuated by filling your letter with the most unsubstantiated, vile, angry, slanderous and bitter attacks on individuals I have ever seen printed on this campus.

It is you, Kevin, that deserves comparison to the hateful acts of the white supremacists members of the White Knights, and not those you so easily accuse.

In case you haven't been to church lately I would like to remind you that the "Catholic culture" you so passionately defend also includes individuals such as Mother Teresa and St. Francis of Assisi, both of whom are models of brotherly love, compassion and universal acceptance and fellowship, things you know absolutely nothing about.

Furthermore, I do not recall the Village People identifying themselves as self-appointed representatives of the Catholic Church.

Is the Pope now cutting record deals and touring the club circuit in your self-constructed fantasy world, Kevin?

I graduate in less than two months and will no longer have to endure people like you who can't see past the end of his proverbial nose.

In closure I offer the following advice for Mr. Sherlock: if you don't like abortion, DON'T HAVE ONE, and if you don't like what the Newswire has to say, DON'T READ IT.

For the rest of you, Nota Bene: Illegitimi non carborabunt, because they are not worth the time.

-John Stover
Senior, Sociology

It's alcohol, stupid

I was able to let out a sick laugh after reading Dan Sigward's column in the February 24 issue.

What struck me as being so funny was the blatant admission by Sigward that college life at Xavier "centers around alcohol, plain and simple."

I have been saying the same thing for a long time, but people always seems to become uncomfortable when I say it. So, you can imagine my surprise at seeing such a statement printed in the Xavier newspaper.

Alcohol on the college campus is typically an issue that American educators and students try to avoid.

No faculty person is willing to admit that alcohol use is prevalent on their college campus, but they are not willing to disavow that fact either. Rather, alcohol use is hinted at and joked about among faculty and students.

Mr. Sigward's editorial does not hint at alcohol use among underage students. Rather, it openly acknowledges that this practice occurs on weekends.

While I applaud Mr. Sigward's frankness, I wish to reply to his editorial in a somewhat negative manner.

The reason why I don't attend the Student Activities Council events on the weekends is because I'm sick of the Xavier weekend atmosphere altogether.

My impression of Xavier on the weekend is that it is a place of heavy drinking. Furthermore, the heavy drinking occurs among underage students who enjoy the thrill of getting smashed.

I have strong feelings against the use of alcohol at any age, but I find college students' irresponsible use of alcohol particularly revolting.

This view is not simply based on moral or religious beliefs but it is also based on practical experience. I know firsthand that alcohol destroys. It destroys friends, marriages, families, lives and people.

I don't want to be involved with something that destroys so many things.

Since I have come to associate heavy drinking with the Xavier weekend, I never spend my weekend nights on campus.

So, however nicely planned the SAC activities may be, I never consider attending them. It is unfortunate but I have formed a mental block against anything having to do with the Xavier weekend.

That, Mr. Sigward, is why I don't attend SAC events.

XU gets #9 seed, faces New Orleans Friday

Men are NCAA bound, headed for Hoosier Dome

By Emmett Prosser
The Xavier Newswire

At 6 p.m. Sunday, the stomach of anyone involved with the Xavier basketball program felt like a peptic ulcer was coming on. At 6:35, however the condition of all who felt the pain turned to complete recovery.

Pepto Bismol was needed after Saturday's loss to Evansville. Alka Seltzer was on ice, Dick Vitale told Pete Gillen to "break out the Maalox." But when the pairings were announced there was XU (23-5) seeded number nine, playing New Orleans (25-3, seeded eighth) in Indianapolis at the Hoosier Dome on Friday.

"We were all pretty nervous," Senior Jamie Gladden said. "I think I lost ten pounds in the last day because I sweated so much.

The reason for the nervousness was an 80-69 loss to the Aces. The automatic NCAA bid went out the window and in blew the anxiety.

The Muskies played their worst 10 minute stretch of the season. In a ten minute span, the Muskies went three of 23 from the floor.

"It was a combination of their good defense and our inability to make shots," said Head Coach

Steve Gentry played as intense as his face looks here in the MCC final. The Muskies will be looking for the same intensity Friday.

Pete Gillen.

Many at the end of the evening thought that the NCAA committee would not take two teams from the MCC conference, but the committee did the right thing in giving Xavier the at-large bid.

"I think having basketball people (Terry Holland, C.M. Newton) on the committee helped," said Gillen. "It was better than having the Athletic director of U of Guacamole deciding where we would go."

The committee decided Indianapolis would be the right place for Xavier. Fans might be upset that they won't be able to bake on a beach in Orlando but judging from the recent havoc mother nature raved in the south, you wouldn't be able to do that anyway.

Xavier has had good fortune in NCAA play at the Hoosier Dome. The Musketeers have a 3-1 record at the dome including wins over Missouri, Kansas State and Georgetown as well as a close loss (65-60) to Duke.

"All things considered, we couldn't be in a better situation," said Xavier Athletic Director Jeff Fogelson. "We'll have more fans in Indianapolis than any other place that we could have gone, we're excited."

Indiana is also playing in the Hoosier Dome. They are the number one seed in the Midwest region and will have at least 35,000 screaming maniacs on their side.

"It will be great seeing all those red sweaters in one place," said Gillen. "This is the greatest sporting event in the World, one loss and you're done."

Gillen felt the telling piece of the puzzle for the committee to include the Muskies in the big dance was an 67-41 drubbing of Duquesne the night before the UE loss.

"That was the nail in the coffin I think," said Gillen. "We had beat Evansville twice and our power rating has been high all year."

Still, the announcement of the bids were tough to wait for. "We had a similar situation the year we beat Georgetown," said Gladden. "But I was more confident that we would get in that year."

Before the pairings were announced, Senior Aaron Williams predicted XU would face UNO in the first round. When the Muskies name came up on the big screen, shouts of joy rang out.

"We got a second chance," said Gladden. "We're going to appreciate this bid more."

"It's everybody's dream to get into the tournament," said Gillen.

"Last year we didn't get in, it's like your pet dog had a nervous breakdown. "This year the dog is well, anything can happen."

So Friday night X begins its quest for the Final Four. And for Xavier, the road starts with the University of New Orleans.

Lady Musketeers get first ever bid in the big dance

By Courtney Morrison
Xavier News Source

Xavier's women earned their first postseason trip by defeating the Butler Bulldogs, 82-72 in the final game of the 1993 Midwestern Collegiate Conference Women's Basketball Tournament.

With the win, XU will face Clemson (18-10) in the first round of the Midwest region tonight at 7 p.m.

XU, the number two seed in the MCC tourney knocked off the top-seeded Bulldogs on the strong performances of three All-Tournament Team selections.

Freshman Amy Siefring, a 5-7 guard from Coldwater, Ohio, came off the bench to shoot three of three from the three point line for 13 points in the championship game. Siefring was Xavier's leading scorer, with a career high 19 points, in the Lady Musketeers' 74-72 victory over Detroit Mercy in the quarterfinals.

Senior Monique Greene, a 5-9 forward from Columbus, Ohio, also earned a spot on the All-Tourney Team as she contributed 38 points and 30 rebounds, including game-highs of 10 and 11 boards against Butler and Detroit Mercy, respectively.

Tournament MVP Carol

Madsen, a 6-0 junior forward from Cincinnati, scored a combined 70 points in the three games to set a conference tournament record. Two of Madsen's most important points came at the last second of XU's quarterfinal game versus Detroit Mercy. With the score tied 72-72, Xavier inbounded the ball with the clock and shot clock in tandem at 30 seconds. The Lady Musketeers remained patient and put the ball in Madsen's hands as she hit a turnaround jumper in the paint to give XU a 74-72 win.

"It's great for our program," said Head coach Mark Ehlen. "We wanted this last year, it's the sweetest feeling in the world."

Women -from page 6

With the tournament title, they received an automatic bid to join the field of 48 teams. Xavier is 21-8 heading into the first round of the Midwest Regional.

"Things really started to click when we were 8-7," said Madsen. "At 8-7, I thought it was going to be a long year."

The Lady Musketeers have had to overcome a lot of adversity just to earn their first postseason appearance.

With only one week remaining in the regular season, they lost two starters, including First Team All-MCC selection Lynn Bihn, a 6-1 sophomore post player from Fort Recovery, Ohio.

Bihn suffered a knee injury during XU's 79-69 win at Evansville on March 1. She underwent surgery on Thursday, March 11, to repair torn ligaments.

"We really haven't changed much since Lynn went down," said Ehlen. "It was a great loss for us though because there was a time where she was really carrying us."

Bihn led the team in scoring by pulling down an average 8.0 rebounds per game and was XU's second leading scorer at 17.0 points per game. She started all 53 games of her two-year career.

"We've started Monique in the post since she went down," said Ehlen. "She has given us some extra quickness and she's done a great job guarding people that are taller than she is."

Sophomore point guard

Nicole Like also suffered a knee-related injury in the very last few minutes of the final regular season game versus Detroit Mercy. Her playing condition is tentative but she did sit out for the entire MCC Tournament.

Ehlen is concerned with Clemson's height. They start two players that are 6-2. However Clemson has been to the tournament before and XU thinks this could work to its advantage.

"We're hoping they look past us," said Madsen. "They don't know who we are."

"It's more of a big deal for us (to go to the tournament)," said Ehlen. "I'm sure it is a big deal for them, but for us this is very satisfying."

For XU to win Madsen has to be in the same type of zone she was in at the MCC final.

"I think Carol is the best kept secret in the country," said Ehlen. "She was just awesome last week in the finals."

History is sure to be made this evening in the Carolinas as Xavier Women's basketball makes their NCAA Tournament debut at 7 p.m. With the drive and determination that has gotten them this far, expect this show to be a big hit.

Some might not think XU has a chance, but XU isn't just happy to be here.

"We've got to prove ourselves," said Ehlen. "We want to be ready to win, we're a good road team, lace 'em up."

If the Lady Muskies win tonight, they will take on the number four seed Stephen F. Austin in Nacogdoches Texas on Saturday or Sunday.

Only 14 schools sent Men's and Women's programs to the NCAA tournament.

UNO has much in common with X

By Emmett Prosser
The Xavier NewsWire

If the Xavier basketball team were a cell, the New Orleans Privateers would be their DNA clone.

UNO is 25-3 and rated 16th in the country. X has only one common opponent with the Privateers- Notre Dame. The Muskies whipped ND 75-60, UNO was defeated by the Irish 45-43.

"I don't think the Notre Dame game is an indication of how good this team is," said Head Coach Pete Gillen.

UNO has two big guys up front, quick guards and a slasher. Sounds like I'm describing the Muskies right? Wrong.

The Privateers main man is Ervin Johnson. He's the Sun Belt Conference version of Mr. everything. At 6-11 and 242 pounds, he's been one of the most dominating centers in the South. He's averaging 18.3 points and 12 rebounds per game. His best performance was a 32 point 27 rebound effort at Lamar.

Johnson's partner in crime is forward Melvin Simon. At 6-8 and 245, his wide body is his strength. His 12.7 points per game and 7.5 rebounds per game are not indicative of how important he is to the team.

"Simon is the man because everyone knows how good Johnson is," said Kevin Casper, an avid basketball fan who has seen UNO play many times this season. "He goes to the glass better than any other player in the Sun Belt. He gets a lot of garbage, he lives off it."

Reggie Garrett plays the small forward. He's a slashing type player similar to X's Tyrice Walker.

The back court features a pair of small quick guards. 5-9 inch

Gerald Williams, a junior college transfer has been coming on of late. He scored 27 points at Western Kentucky three weeks ago, leading UNO to a 71-67 win. He sets up the offense and looks to drive.

Also 5-9 is Reni Mason, a transfer from Louisiana Tech. He only averages eight points a contest but he's capable of double figures.

"They're a similar team to us," said Gillen. "They're big inside and they pound the boards. I think we like to run a little more."

The top three point threat comes off the bench. Guard Tony Madison was a 45 percent three point shooter in junior college. He's attempted 118 treys this season, hitting 45. (38%)

"We'll have to change defenses," said Gillen. "I'm not as concerned with them (UNO) as I am about ourselves and how we execute."

Sports editor

On the first day God created basketball, On the second day, the regular season and on the third day, the NCAA tournament.

Okay, maybe it's not a biblical experience, but it is a profitable one for many. Xavier Head Coach Pete Gillen calls it the "greatest sporting event in the World." For some it's just another diversion from homework, for others it's an exercise in stress management, for me, it's the epitome of what college basketball is all about.

64 teams begin competition with a dream of being in New Orleans in April. About ten or eleven other schools are cursing the tournament committee right now because they thought they deserved to be in the dance. The NIT will welcome these schools with open arms, but the institutions won't want to hug anybody.

But as for the real show, the field looks as competitive as ever. Duke isn't in the East Region this year, they're road to the Big Easy this year starts in Chicago. And though it looks like they'll blow out of the Windy City and into St. Louis with ease, the path could stop there. The Midwest is stacked. Indiana, Kansas, Louisville, California and of course Xavier.

In the Southeast, Seton Hall seems to have the best chance of going to the Final Four. Kentucky will attempt to do the monster mash with Jamal Mashburn, but UK relies too much on the three point shooting of Travis Ford.

Upset special: How about Evansville over Florida State. FSU is historically an average tournament team. UE has one of the most disciplined teams in the country, and a key ingredient of any good club- they make their free throws.

In the East the pavement to the south looks smooth for North Carolina if Derrick Phelps is healthy. If not Nolan Richardson and Arkansas will bid them adieu at the regional semifinal.

The West is my I don't want it you take it region. By process of elimination, I'm going with The winner of the Georgia Tech Michigan game.

What about Xavier's chances? Many say the Musketeers are driving straight toward a cliff with the possibility of facing Indiana if they win Friday. But X's 3-1 record in the Hoosier Dome is no joke (IU lost there this season).

"We can't worry about who we play," said Aaron Williams. "We just have to come ready to play."

64 teams will come ready to play beginning tomorrow, and God will be watching.

Concern for the Milner Hotel produces The Mixfits Festival

Middlemarch will be one of the seven bands performing at The Mixfits Festival, a benefit for the Milner Hotel, on Sunday, March 21 at Bogarts.

By Molly A. Donnellon
The Xavier Newswire

The Milner Hotel looks like your average seedy, downtown dwelling, with neon signs and all. However, the Milner is often an affordable, temporary home for this city's homeless, giving it a warmth that other settings can't provide.

Soon the homeless families may have to leave the only home they know as the Milner Hotel gets bulldozed to make way for Phase II of the Grammercy, a new Towne Properties apartment complex.

Though the city has agreed to provide replacement housing for the 20-30 social agencies that use the Milner, the residents are not satisfied with this alternative. One reason is because the Milner has a 24-hour restaurant and lounge that other alternative housing units won't have.

Owner Ron Milner, has refused to sell this hotel that's been on Garfield Place since the 1920s. If he is forced to sell, though, a lawsuit may follow.

Henceforth, the caring folks at the Milner, Everybody's News, 97X, WNKU, and our own WVXU, have joined forces to help promote an event that is dedicated to the defense of the Milner.

The Mixfits Festival will be at Bogarts on Sunday, March 21 from 2 p.m. - midnight. The day-long concert will be a benefit for the Cincinnati Homeless Coalition. Seven bands will play on Sunday. Among them are Drums for Peace, Middlemarch and the headliner, Brainiac. There will also be entertainment in between the music acts.

Tickets for The Mixfits Festival are $7.50, or $8.50 the day of the show.

Believe It Or Not: Alien Abduction in Fire In The Sky

By Sara Hayes
The Xavier Newswire

Imagine a Twilight Zone episode of Aliens that is actually based upon a true story and you have the basic premise of the new film Fire In The Sky.

Based upon the true story of Travis Walton, a logger from Snowflake, Arizona, Fire In The Sky presents an adequate case for the possibility of alien abduction.

The movie depicts Walton's experiences after November 5, 1975, the day Walton disappeared from the White Mountains of Northeastern Arizona only to reappear miles away 5 days later. Walton's story is one of the most well-documented cases of suspected alien abduction ever, because there were five unrelated, reliable witnesses.

D.B. Sweeney, as Walton, portrays a normal man who, after undergoing extraordinary experiences is faced with serious life changes.

Sweeney's undertaking of Walton greatly adds to the credibility of the movie. His portrayal of Walton's catatonic state is memorable, as is his hallucinogenic journey down the hospital corridor.

Composed of well-edited flashbacks and several (sometimes hoaxy, sometimes effective) special effects, the movie deals mostly with Walton's subsequent transformation as he come to terms with his ordeal. Director Robert Lieberman does tend to focus too much on Walton's relationship with his best friend Mike Rogers (Robert Patrick) who is initially suspected of murdering Walton.

James Garner returns to the big screen as state investigator Lt. Frank Watters, a seasoned lawman who, to this day, refuses to believe Walton's story. Watters, is known for never having an unsolved case, except for that of Walton's disappearance. Henry Thomas (think E.T.) also makes a return as 16 year old Greg Hayes, a witness to Walton's abduction.

The cast of the movie, including Sweeney, Garner, and Thomas, along with others such as Craig Sheffer are credible enough to make audiences accepting of the possibility of this incidence. The movie is well produced, as it does not attempt to answer the question of the possibilities of other worlds for anyone, but forces the audience to decide for themselves.

When asked about his ordeal,

Walton recently replied, "I ran away from this for years but could never escape it. No matter how much we try to avoid certain things in our life, they always seem to come back. I finally chose to confront it. I'm not hiding anymore. An extraordinary thing happened to me but it hasn't changed my faith or my obligations or my character. I'm still like everybody else. I have a job and a family. I have to live my life."
